GREETINGS FROM THE ST. JAMES INFIRMARY!

The St. James Infirmary is a peer-based health & safety clinic for current and former sex workers and their current primary partners. Since 1999 we’ve been offering services like primary medical care, mental health care, massage and acupuncture, support groups, harm reduction services, and hormone replacement therapy by and for the trans community. All of our services are confidential, non-judgmental and free to the sex worker community. In the spring of 2014 we were lucky enough to welcome TGIP into our office space. It has been amazing to share community with an organization so dedicated and driven towards justice and liberation. Since TGIP moved in with us, we’ve had some great opportunities to collaborate on political projects, to support each other’s work, and to coordinate our services to the maximum benefit of our community. Between the legal and social support offered by TGIP and the physical and mental health services of the SJ, there’s a lot happening by and for the trans community in our shared space. If there’s any information about our services we can send you, let us know! Be sure to share with your friends and family. We’d love to meet you!

Hello My Precious Dolls: With all the horrid things that are happening, we must be cautious. No matter your living arrangements, we are “pry". There are some wonderful goings on... however not what there should be. Let there still be “HOPE.” We are at TGI Justice. We are all as much as we can, with what little we have to work with. We will let you down and keep the light burning for as long as we can. We're committed to you and here to help, as we believe in our community. As I have heard—tomorrow can be a good day. We treasure your letters and calls. It is important to maintain our connection so we can build a safe haven together.

Be safe—as safe as we can—and stay strong – not physically, but spiritually, emotionally and mentally! Love.

Miss Major, Executive Director

Hello peeps! Just want to send some love and well wishes! Please know we’re declaring every Tuesday as Trans Liberation Tuesday! It’s the day’s focus and highlights showing some love for all trans folks and that’s also the day we here at TGIP are responding to mail from the folks on the inside.

We are also working on developing our grassroots re-entry plan, so if you know a sister getting out let them know that we love them and would love to receive them! It’s all about keeping our community safe and outside of jails and prisons.

Much sisterly love and new beginnings! Please learn to stick together and love on one another.

Clarity starts at home. If you are not loving your community, ask yourself if you’re loving yourself.

Please be safe and stay strong!

Janetta Johnson, Program Director

NLG & TLC

In 2015, NLG has expanded our relationship with the National Lawyers Guild and Transgender Law Center to better inform our organizing work and legal advocacy work. Thank you to the deepening relationships that will benefit our TGI people inside of prisons, jails, and detention centers as well as those of us outside.

DECARCERATE PA

Decarcerate PA is a grassroots campaign working to end mass incarceration in Pennsylvania. We formed in 2011 to fight the $685 million expansion of Pennsylvania’s prison system amid drastic cuts to education, social services and healthcare. We set out to build a campaign to shrink the prison system and expand the community institutions we actually need:Alde(nducation, employment, housing, reen-, try, and health care. Our three point platform demands 1) no new prisons, 2) decarceration, and 3) community reinvestment. We work to build public consciousness that prisons don’t keep us safe and to develop a statewide move- ment to end mass incarceration. This includes creative protests, civil disobedience, grassroots advocacy, and community building events.

In the last few years we successfully stalled six anti-prison bills intended to extract addi- tional costs from people convicted of crimes, and led the outside support efforts for the 1,300 people at Coal Township prison who staged a week-long boycott of the directed meals in protest of prison fail- ure to protect food contents and human rights violations.

We are currently mobilizing for a 24 hour “speak in” to protest a law that attempts to silence prisoners. This spring—along with our work—we will also be launching a cam- paign to end life without parole sentencing in PA. Decarceration now!

ALL OF US OR NONE

All Of Us Or None is a grassroots organization led by formerly incarcerated people committed to fighting for the human dignity of people who have been or are being held captive in America. We are fighting for the full restora- tion of our civil and human rights and against the system that disproportionately strips us of our capcity and upon our release. We demand to be called people and not the dehumanizing labels we are usually referred to, such as ex- offenders. These characteristics prevent us from being seen and treated as human beings. Although we may have been in jail or prison, our lives are much more than the sum total of our past indcursions or accusations. We are presently working towards building the leadership of formerly incarcerated people and working to end state violence and prison-industry. We are working together to address the root causes of mass incarceration, fight for a new right to reentry, and restructuring our state and national bodies and policies to ensure the rights of formerly incarcerated people and providing support for formerly incarcerated people to make the transition back to our communities.

In the spring of 2014 we celebrated the passage of SB1335, a bill to end the coerced sterilization of women in prison’s wishing. This win was the culmination of decades of hard work, organizing, research, and coalition building.

BLACK & PINK

For those who don’t know us, Black & Pink is an open family of LGBT prisoners and “free world” allies who support each other. Our work toward the abolition of the prison industrial complex is rooted in the experience of cur- rently and formerly incarcerated people. We are outraged by the specific violence of the prison industrial complex against LGBT people, and respond through advocacy, education, direct service, and organizing. We send out a newsletter to our incarcerated LGBT mem- bers and maintain a national list of incarcerated LGBTQI members whom we support in finding free world penpals. If you are LGBTQI and want to be on our list, you can write to us at:

3641 Columbia Ave.

Duncker, MA 01238

2014 was a big year for us. We have been developing chapters across the country— including Boise, Buffalo, Chicago, New Orleans, New York City, San Diego and San Francisco. Each of these local chapters has been working locally and in connection to each other to bring in new free world penpals and do different projects, including scholarly workshops, support for recently released people, organizing more workshops and events, parties than ever before, participation in the Black Lives Matter movement, fighting censorship rules and advocating for our mem- bers in various ways. We also did a survey of our incarcerated members and received over 1,500 responses. We are currently entering all the results.

We are excited to continue all of our work in 2015, and especially excited to be celebrating our 10 year anniversary this year! We are at the end of celebration, community building, healing, skills sharing, and planning for the future. It will take place in Boston from October 16-18 and we will be offering stipends to support for- merly incarcerated members to attend. Please get in touch with us if you are being released soon and want to attend.

JUSTICE NOW

Justice Now partners with people in women’s prisons and communities impacted by imprison- ment to challenge gendered violence and build a safe compassionate world without prisons.

In September of 2014, we celebrated the passage of SB1335, a bill to end the coerced vigilance of women in prison’s wishing. This win was the culmination of decades of hard work, organizing, research, and coalition building.

TGI Justice Project was continually inspired by the existence of, activism of, and leadership structure of TMV in Minnesota and wanted to send a salute and a thank you for the legacy your organizers and contri- butors have left as you transition to closing the organization. Thank you! We look forward to the day that our communities have the support we need to truly build and maintain organizations for us and by us. TGIJ also wants to celebrate the ongoing TGI youth leadership of BreakOut in NOLA and FIERCE in NYC.

We have been fortunate to partner with so many incredible organizations to bring about this change. In particular we want to thank the Legal Aid Society and Willie, Farr and Gallagher for their incredible drive and legal expertise in guiding this case. We are grateful to the Health Care for All New York campaign for supporting us and lifting up our communities. And of course, we are grateful to the Cuomo administration for being willing to step up and address this long-standing injustice.

The regulation is not perfect – we would like to see care covered for young people under 18, and we would like to see all forms of gender-affirming care covered. But this is a great start. We invite all transgender people of color, low income people and allies to join us as we plot our next steps. Stay tuned for campaign updates and next steps in early 2015!

Transgender surgeries are now covered for San Francisco residents on Medi-Cal or without insurance.

It’s a new day for transgender health. These surgeries are now covered:

And the fight continues. As we have seen in Ferguson, Staten Island, and all over the country, the legal system is not designed to protect our communities. We must fight for the lives of our community members, fight to end racism and all forms of oppression or violence and poverty will persist.

Only hours after yesterday’s news was announced, we received devastating news that the appeals court in Massachusetts overturned the decision in Koekelker v. Spencer – a groundbreaking case where the court said that a transgender prisoner has the right to gender-affirming surgery. The decision to deny this right will be appealed to the higher courts, but we cannot rely solely on the legal system to fight for healthcare access and gender self-determination. Just as our community mobilized for this Medicaid win, we must continue to organize with our community members in prison. We believe that all people are entitled to gender-affirming care. We believe that all people deserve to be free. We believe that the fight for gender self-determination will not be over until all people are free to self-determine their gender – and until the prison system as we know it is abolished.

The work we are doing is the work of liberation. This week’s Medicaid announcement is a tremendous victory for all transgender people. It is also a testament to the power of movement building, to working together to bring about the world we believe in, and to the combined strength of legal work, community organizing, media, and government advocacy. We could not be more proud of our communities and our allies for the work we have done.

Transgender surgeries are now covered for San Francisco residents on Medi-Cal or without insurance.

It’s a new day for transgender health. These surgeries are now covered:

We will continue to organize and mobilize in order to ensure all of our families are safe and remain together. Queer and trans immigrants rise up to demand “not one more deportation,” of our queer and trans undocumented brothers and sisters and our families.

Familia: Trans Queer Liberation Movement and DeColores Queer Orange County are bringing together queer and trans immigrants from across the country to proclaim “liberation and not deportation,” and denounce the deportations separating our families and communities.

We encourage our trans and queer immigrant friends and allies to mobilize in support of the Trumpi intervention in order to stop the deportation of LGBT asylum seekers and their families.

Transgender hero CeCe McDonald walks free after being granted two thirds of the way through her sentence. McDonald, who had been serving out her time in a men’s prison, was greeted by Orange Is the New Black star and fellow trans woman Laverne Cox upon her exit. Cox is producing a documentary on McDonald, slated to be released in 2016, titled Free CeCe.

Medicaid programs will now cover transgender healthcare following SRLP’s twelve-year campaign

BY ELANA REDFIELD, SYLVIA RIVERA LAW PROJECT, REPRINTED FROM SRLP WEBSITE

Yesterday, Governor Cuomo and the New York State Department of Health announced that our Medicaid programs will now cover transgender healthcare. This is a momentous victory for SRLP community members and all transgender New Yorkers.

The proposed regulation will allow transgender people to access hormones and surgeries under Medicaid. Introduced on December 17, the regulation is open for 45 days of public comment. The announcement comes in response to Cruz v. Zucker – a lawsuit the Sylvia Rivera Law Project brought in partnership with the Legal Aid Society and the law firm Willie, Farr and Gallagher – and to the incredible persistence of our communities in demanding this care.

It may be useful to share a little history of this regulation. Passed in 1996, the regulation banned access to hormones and all surgeries commonly sought by transgender people. The impact was quick and deep, as thousands of low income transgender people and transgender people of color were cut off from life-saving care and denied much-needed treatments.

Since SRLP opened our doors in 2002, one of our primary goals has been to bring down this discriminatory ban. Here is a brief history of this incredible campaign:

• In collaboration with other transgender and queer groups, such as Queens for Economic Justice, Audre Lorde Project and the Gender Identity Project of the NY LGBT Center, we began organizing and strategizing to take down the regulation.

• Working with the New York Legal Assistance Group (NYLAG) and Orrick, Herrington & Sutcliffe LLP, we filed the first lawsuit to challenge the ban, Castile v. Daines.

• When the court was unwilling to overturn the regulation, we partnered with the Legal Aid Society to bring a challenge to Governor Patterson.

• We held health care focus groups for trans people of color and developed a Cost-Benefit Memo gathering all available data on transgender health care.

• When Governor Patterson was unwilling to overturn the regulation, we partnered with Housing Works and the Empire State Pride Agenda to bring it to Governor Cuomo’s Medicaid Redesign Team, with 500 signed petitions. Assembly Member Richard Gottfried and Senator Brad Hoyman declared their support.

• When the Redesign Team refused to overturn the regulation, we started our healthcare media campaign with GLAAD and Calls Lorde this time with videos, infographics, and thousands of signed petitions.

• Working with Make the Road NY, GLOBE, and the Audre Lorde Project, we then used direct action to keep transgender healthcare on the agenda for the Department of Health. We met with the Health Care for All New York Coalition (HCANY) to join forces.

• May 30, 2014 – U.S. Department of Health repealed transgender healthcare ban under federal Medicare program after Denne Mallon case and advocacy by organizations including GLAD, ACLU, and NCLR.

• In June 2014 we filed Cruz v. Zucker – the same week TIME Magazine hailed “The Transgender Tipping Point.”

• December 10, 2014 – As a result of our lawsuit and advocacy by HCANY, Governor Cuomo released a bulletin clarifying that private insurance that covers mental health care must cover transgender health care.

• December 17, 2014 – New Medicaid Regulation introduced for 45 days of public comment.

Organizers Speak Out Against Police Brutality & Violence

“There is no such thing as a single-issue struggle because we do not live single-issue lives.”

— AUDRE LORDE

From January 1st, 2014 to today, 226 Trans women have been murdered. Just let that number soak in—that almost one life lost every day this year. The Transgender Day of Remembrance is a time to grieve as a community. But on this day, we will not be silent. On the eve of “Thanksgiving,” the busiest night for bars and clubs, we will take to the streets of The Grove and demand justice for our sisters. This is the time to bring your fire and passion and prepare to be visible in a huge way.

This is a formal complaint! We will cry aloud! This a large expression, a declaration of objection. Reservations are for restaurants—our disapproval will be heard. We will be peacefully unruly. We will utter, articulate, sing, chant.

To those in solitary confinement in California

Critical Resistance has been heavily involved in supporting efforts by those in solitary confinement through our work to amplify the messages and demands of past peaceful actions. Currently we are working to identify a campaign that will most effectively succeed in meeting those demands. As a part of this process, we are asking people in solitary to correspond with members of our Solitary Project workgroup in order to create better inside-outside working relationships, and to learn about your ideas for how to move forward. We also want to increase our contacts with family members and loved ones in order to deepen our collaboration and support their needs.

We would love to have your thoughts, experiences, and ideas included in this project to help inform our work. Would you be willing to answer some questions? If so, please reply to this letter at the below address, and we will send you follow up questions. Please send your response to:

Outreach to Trans Men and Intersex People

TGI Justice Projects centers and has traditionally focused on trans women's leadership, particularly, currently and formerly incarcerated trans women’s, and most frequently Black trans women’s leadership. Trans Women of Color’s leadership will always drive TGIJP and at TGIJP we recognize that any movement for liberation of trans people will include all TGI people. In relationship with California Coalition for Women Prisoners and Justice Now, in 2015 TGIJP will be expanding our organizing work to include more trans men and intersex people to most broadly and accurately work to better the conditions for our people inside and outside of the prison industrial complex. We feel that centering trans women of color’s leadership is strategically necessary and we want to build power in our community in the broadest sense. As we work to identify interventions and solutions to the massive violence targeting TGI people, especially TGI people inside of prisons, jails and detention centers, we want to keep a focus on trans women while ensuring that our scope advances towards freedom and justice for all TGI people. TGIJP will be doing education about issues impacting intersex people and will continue to be thinking about the impacts of institutionalized gender binary and control systems. In addition to building relationships with more of our people, we also are trying to find out more about the conditions of folks inside and the current context for our people, all of our people. Please be in touch if you are trans masculine or an intersex person and would like to engage with us in the endeavors to see a radically different system of justice. Thank you for your resilience and leadership!

OCTOBER 2014

Lavenne Cox’s TV show, The T-Word, debuted on MTV. The T-Word follows seven transgender youths (between the ages of 12 and 24) who tell their stories. “For many of us, the ‘T’ in LGBT means more than transgender, it also means truth,” said Cox. “The cast members in this documentary are fearlessly living their truths and in sharing their stories will send the message to other trans youth that it’s OK to be who you are.”

NOVEMBER 2014

Janet Mock launched a Trans Book Drive on IndieGoGo that’s raised $10,000 to send reading materials and care packages to trans inmates through her organization partner LGBT Books For Prisoners.

In the world of online dating, OKCupid responded to mounting pressure to expand gender and sexuality options by rolling out nine new sexual orientation and 19 new gender choices. Google recently announced that they will accommodate “infinite” genders by allowing users to type in their own gender.

DECEMBER 2014

Transparent was honored with two Golden Globe nominations: Best Comedy and Best Actor in a Comedy (Jeffrey Tambor). Transparent, created by Jill Soloway (of Six Feet Under and United States of Tara), has garnered acclaim for its humanistic, layered portrayal of a late-life transitioner, Maura, and her decades-long struggle to come out to her very complicated family. The show is primarily based on Soloway’s own experiences after her parent came out as transgender in 2011.

Attorney General Eric Holder announced in December that the Department of Justice will no longer argue that transgender people are not covered by Title VII, the federal law that prohibits sex discrimination in employment.

JANUARY 2015

Activists across the U.S. celebrated a victory when Monica Jones, who was arrested in May 2013 in Phoenix under a local law targeted at sex workers, won an appeal of her conviction. The ACLU tells the story. “When an undercover officer saw Monica Jones, a black transgender woman, walking down the street, it was enough to convince him that she intended to engage in prostitution. It was on that basis that he approached, stopped, and arrested her.” On the news of her acquittal, Jones had this to say: “I am so grateful to my legal team and all of my supporters across the country and world. My conviction being vacated is important but it is a small win in our larger fight for justice.”

For the first time in United States history, the President of the United States has acknowledged the importance of legal protections for transgender people during his State of the Union address to the American people. In his speech President Barack Obama stated, “As Americans, we respect human dignity... That’s why we defend free speech, and advocate for prison reform, and condemn the persecution of women, or religious minorities, or people who are lesbian, gay, bisexual, or transgender. We do these things not only because they’re right, but because they make us safer.” Masen Davis, Executive Director of Transgender Law Center, commented, “President Obama’s public recognition of transgender people in his State of the Union address was historic. While it seems like a simple thing — saying the word ‘transgender’ in a speech — President Obama’s statement represents significant progress for transgender people and the movement towards equality for all.”

Justice for Jennifer Laude!

U.S. Out of the Philippines!

BY GABRIELA USA

We are deeply saddened by the murder of Jennifer Laude, a 26-year old transgender woman from the Philippines, and express our deepest condolences to Jennifer’s family and friends. On October 11, 2014, Jennifer was found dead, clearly the result of a violent hate crime towards transgender people. Her murder also underscores the ongoing inequality of joint U.S.-RP agreements like the Visiting Forces Agreement (VFA) and the Enhanced Defense Cooperation Agreement (EDCA) are military pacts that govern the entry and presence of American troops in Philippine territory, basically giving US military personnel impunity.

U.S. Marine PFC Joseph Scott Pemberton accused of killing Jennifer Laude in the Philippines, is now detained in Camp Aguinaldo under the “joint-custody” of both U.S. and Philippine authorities. We believe that both governments are making it appear that Pemberton is under Philippine authority because of the overwhelming pressure from the people. However, the U.S. still is not fully surrendering jurisdiction to the Philippine government and proper detention, investigation and justice has yet to be served. The VFA is an obstruction to justice and enforces unequal relations.

The extent of U.S. deployment in the Philippines costs an annual $30 million allotted by the U.S. Congress and hundreds of millions of taxpayer dollars in other assistance.

Such a practice, however, becomes unscororable when U.S. funding is used by a regime that – to borrow words from President Barack Obama - “clings to power through corruption and deceit and the silencing of dissent,” by using extrajudicial killings, enforced disappearances, forced evacuation of rural communities, illegal detentions, and torture.

The VFA, despite the military exercises and aid, provides absolutely no short-term nor long-term benefit to the people of either the U.S. or the Philippines. Filipino citizens have staged an escalating number of protests to voice their opposition to the Agreement and its violation of Philippine sovereignty.

In October, GABRIELA USA and BAYAN organized and led protests across the USA to protest transphobia and imperialism. In SF a hundred people, mostly cis-gender came together with leaders of EL/Gu Para TransLatinas and TGUIP to advance towards justice and liberation.

First transgender mayor elected in central India

EDITING BY ALISA TANG, REPRINTED FROM REUTERS | JANUARY 5, 2015

NEW DELHI (Thomson Reuters Foundation) - A city in central India has elected the country’s first transgender mayor, nine months after a court ruled that transgender be recognized as a legal third gender, local media reported.

Madhup Kinnar, 35, won the mayoral election in Raigarh in the mineral-rich state of Chhattisgarh on Sunday, beating her opponent from the governing Bharatiya Janata Party (BJP) by more than 4,500 votes, the Press Trust of India reported in a story published on the news website第一post.com.

Television images showed a sari-clad Kinnar, with a large bindi on her forehead, greeting supporters who placed marigold garlands around her neck.

Kinnar - who is from the Dalit or “low caste” community and used to earn a living singing and dancing in trains - said that she was overwhelmed by her election.

“People have shown faith in me. I consider this win as love and blessings of people for me. I’ll put in my best efforts to accomplish their dreams,” Kinnar was quoted as saying.

“It was the public support that encouraged me to enter the poll fray for the first time and because of their support only, I emerged as the winner.”

Activists say there are hundreds of thousands of transgender people in India, but because they were not legally recognized, they faced ostracism, discrimination, abuse and forced prostitution.

Last April, India’s Supreme Court recognized transgender as a legal third gender and called on the government to ensure their equal treatment.

While the landmark judgment was welcomed by human rights campaigners, many say it contradicts the court’s reinstatement of a gay site ban that has resulted in the persecution of lesbian, gay, bisexual and transgender (LGBT) people, forcing many to conceal their sexual identity.

that the mainstream media reports on trans women of color?

KG: So for me these stories don’t get it right. The reporting is often times shabby and sensationalized and focused more on victim shaming and blaming than actually reporting facts. The facts is trans women of color are being viciously attacked and murdered. In most cases the attacker was a longtime lover or friend who knew about their truth (so that old meme of “the guy didn’t know she was trans” is bull crap). Every time I hear another story it’s like a dagger to my gut. I have stopped reading the articles due to all the misgendering and transphobic comments that people bring up. Just look at the recent murder of Mia Henderson, for example. The murders will get reported in the news spin cycle and then forgotten about a day or two later. The fact is society and the media sees the lives of Trans women of color as disposable and invisible. Folks have to educate themselves, we live in a digital age for crying out loud. Willful ignorance is an excuse.

TCF: How can we raise awareness of violence against trans women of color and move towards eradication of the violence altogether?

NST: Education is key to the process of creating change. We must broaden our understanding of violence/against trans folks. Violence is not just a stranger holding a knife; it can come from intimate partners, friends, family, and can be as simple as someone kicking one out of a bathroom, calling a trans women a ‘man’, or certain states not allowing the change of gender markers on state IDs. We must acknowledge that it usually starts at an institutional level. For this reason, there is a call for action from trans folks and allies to unite, rally, and lobby until justice is served for the countless murders of trans women of color.

TCF: Violence and criminalization are issues that affect our society as a whole (particularly people of color), but far too often people outside of the LGBTQ community feel violence against trans people is “not my issue,” which further contributes to the silencing of trans women of color’s experiences and to a lack of political mobilization by people who should be allies. What does it mean to be a good ally?

KG: Thank you for asking this question. This is one of those issues that rarely gets talked about. I don’t get folk who follow that mantra of “this is not my issue.” Um, actually it is a human rights issue, so I need you to be interested. The fact is at the root cause of all this violence against trans women of color is racial injustices, and until we eradicate that, we will most likely continue to be attacked. The facts is our white trans sisters are not being attacked as frequently as our trans sisters of color; this is not a coincidence it all comes back to race, class and privilege, and that is what I wish our allies in the black community would understand. Alixshy is not a retweet; it’s not a Facebook ‘like.’ Alixshy is actually doing the work to help elevate the lived experiences of transfolk. It is providing a platform for trans color to tell them their stories, resources or guiding them to resources that help them, holding other folks accountable who misgender, victim shame, or use transphobic language in daily conversation. Allies can also donate to trans-affirming organizations like the Trans Women of Color Collective, the Audre Lorde Project, the Sylvia Rivera Law Project, or Trans Tech Social.

NST: People outside the LGBTQ community who feel it’s “not my issue” are allowing world destruction. Have we not witnessed and/or learned about the historical legacies of segregation, discrimination, racism, imperialism, capitalism, classism, sexism, and other kinds of oppressive hierarchies that lead to wars and death? The lack of involvement also is a reflection of internalized phobias and self-oppression for those who have allowed the ‘system’ to drive their thoughts and actions. What if those murdered were someone in your family, sisters, daughters, cousins, etc.? Being an ally means supporting trans women, speaking out against the violence on trans women of color when you see it, placing them in leadership roles, and funding works/organizations that are for trans women of color and lead by trans women of color.

TCF: Katrina, you were invited to The White House last month for the signing of President Obama’s Executive Order to protect LGBT government employees from workplace discrimination. What was that experience like for you?

KG: Yes. I was asked to go The White House for the Executive Order signing. It was an amazing experience to be in the same room at the POTUS and to walk the corridors of The White House. However, I have to be completely transparent. I was disappointed in the lack of persons of color represented at the event. I was the only (to my knowledge) “out” trans woman of color at that event, and that is unacceptable. DC has plenty of amazing folks doing the work, including Ruby Corado, who founded Casa De Ruby. But it’s like I said on my radio show this week: trans women of color are often an afterthought in this society.

Godness Queen sister Katrina Goodlett is an African American Transgender Woman of Color who is also the Producer/Host of The Kitty Bella Show on Blog Talk Radio. Katrina, who was born and raised in NYC, faced many struggles growing up including Transphobic attacks and violence. Katrina overcame some of her oppression and graduated college in 2005 and has worked as a government employee for 10 years. Katrina brings her past experience as a journalist and writer into her new role as an advocate who believes the voices and actual lived experiences of transfolk need to be heard!! Katrina loves watching basketball and traveling. Katrina created the empowerment campaign #Georgefox in 2013 to raise the visibility and empower transfolk thru clothing.

Nala Simone Toussaint works with the Center For HIV Educational Studies and Training (CHEST) as a Peer Health Navigator working with trans women to support their health goals and wellbeing. In May 2012, She earned her BFA in Fashion Design (cum laude) from the Fashion Institute of Technology. Although her concentration and degree were centered on fashion design, she also has extensive experience working with at-risk youth as a youth mentor and outreach liaison. Toussaint plans to start an organization that helps trans women and youth in the art field to advance educational workshops, and develop strategies that will guide them as they enter the job market.
Trans Women of Color Speaking Truth to Power

A Conversation with Activists Katrina Goodlett and Nala Simone Toussaint

BY TANISHA C. FORD, REPRINTED FROM THE FEMINIST WIRE WITH PERMISSION

Trans women of color are fighting to gain greater visibility for trans issues while also creating safe spaces for themselves. Prominent figures such as Janet Mock and Laverne Cox have brilliantly used their public platforms to address the criminalization and social “othering” of trans women of color in popular media and culture. But far too often the voices of the other women at the vanguard of the movement—those who do not have a global platform—are pushed to the margins of our social and political consciousness. This creates a dangerous silence that muffles the diverse narratives and experiences of trans women of color as well as their radical political perspectives and strategies.

I had the opportunity to speak with two women committed to grassroots activism for trans sisters of color. Katrina Goodlett and Nala Simone Toussaint are two founders of the New York-based Trans Women of Color Collective (TWoCC). The TWoCC is devoted to “creating revolutionary change by uplifting the narratives we’ve done, and that is because we are the voices of the other women at the vanguard of the movement,” says Goodlett.

“The M word that muffles the diverse narratives and experiences of trans women of color, both in the media and in the culture,” Goodlett continues, “is not just about nascent narratives and experiences, as well as their radical political perspectives and strategies.

On June 28, 2014, the world’s largest Pride party after party took a strong step towards justice by throwing a party themed party called “Prison of Love.” At a time when public discussion and media finally had an eye toward the daily violence against trans and queer people, this party theme and promotions were especially harmful and trivializing. Miss Major, TGJ Justice Project, Janet Mock, El/la Para TransLatinas, Community United Against Violence. Trans March, and many other organizations and individuals organized against and sent an open letter to Pride At The Armory promoting letting them know why prisons are not sexy and demanding that they change their theme. Organizations with Gay Shame and LAGA! organized a protest at the party.

From our open letter: Prisons Are Not Sexy

This year at least three SF Pride grand marshals are trans women who have been directly affected by the prison industrial complex. Chelsea Manning is currently incarcerated, Miss Major is previously incarcerated and was political scientist at Attica after the 1971 uprising, and Jewelys Gutierrez was arrested for defending herself from bullies in her high school. The prison industrial complex and the incarceration of generations of people of color, gender variant, trans people, and queer people is not a sexy trope to throw a party around. It’s not that we don’t love sex, sex parties, sex workers, and kink. It’s that we love it as much as we love justice, and are appalled by the casual use of the Prison Industrial Complex, which destroys the lives of millions of people and kills thousands every year, as a party theme. The United States has the highest incarceration rate in the world. In our own LGBTIQ community, incarceration and significant abuses perpetrated by the Prison Industrial Complex constitutes no less than a crisis. According to the National Center for Transgender Equality, nearly 1 in 6 trans people have been incarcerated at some point in their lives. Among Black trans people, 47% have been incarcerated at some point in their lives. These rates overwhelmingly reflect the experiences of transgender women and especially trans women of color, who are housed in men’s prisons and face catastrophic rates of physical abuse, psychological terror, rape and sexual assault, and death. According to Just Detention International, 4% of LGBT prisoners reported being assaulted while in prison. Not only is our queer community being harmed, the War on Drugs and the increasing privatization of prisons has created a phenomenon of mass incarceration of young Black and Latino men, and increasingly women too, which has economically, socially, and politically devastated these communities. We are not interested in juking anyone’s yin or shaming anyone who has fantasies or fetishes about ideas of this real-life violence. We are not interested in censorship or policing anyone’s sex life. We are interested in public space and party themes that get us closer to liberation from systemic and administrative violence and do not recreate a culture that normalizes or continues our oppression. Our push back is about navigating the legal and extra-legally targeting and criminalization of our communities.

The party promoters did not respond by meeting our demands to change the theme nor to donate proceeds to trans and queer community anti-violence organizing projects, but lots of community power and collabora-tive relationships was built. Not the total victory we wanted, but momentum was built for justice, and when our communities come away stronger, clearer, and more able to push back, then the movement wins! Ourswards towards a day without prisons, jails or detention centers!
San Francisco Organizations form TAJA’s Coalition in the Spirit of Taja de Jesus

TAJA’s Coalition organized Trans Liberation Tuesday on Tuesday, February 10, 2015

The Trans Activists for Justice and Accountability Coalition (“TAJA’s Coalition”) is united in anger and outrage over the murder of Taja de Jesus. Taja was stabbed to death on the streets of San Francisco’s Bayview neighborhood on February 3, 2015. Taja was only 36 years and friends and family describe her as a sweet, light-hearted and caring woman with a passion for music and a love for fashion. She was deeply involved in her community and her faith, volunteered at her local food bank, always had a smile and a story to share and constantly lit up a room. Taja was close to her family in San Jose and found acceptance and community in San Francisco. She remained positive and resilient in the face of many struggles and was relentless in pursuing her wellness.

We recognize this epidemic of violence against and murder of trans women, particularly trans women of color, as being deeply rooted in systemic racism, trans misogyny, class inequity, and lack of access to affordable housing for trans communities. This is a national crisis in which the most vulnerable members of our community are fighting for their lives. In Taja’s memory, we will not relent in demanding justice.

Our communities are chronically under-served, over-policed and criminalized, and subject to violence at every turn. Trans women of color are up to 7 times more likely to feel unsafe in their daily lives than cisgender people, and experience pervasive safety concerns about where to live, socialize, and receive basic services according to a just-released LGBTQ Violence Prevention Needs Assessment compiled by the SF LGBT Center and the San Francisco Human Rights Commission.

A call to action issued for Trans Liberation Tuesday demanded an end to the systemic violence against trans communities, and the agenda for the action included a powerful demonstration on the steps of SF City Hall, including speeches from local movement leadership who are trans women of color; a symbolic “die in” and a very passionate testimonial session at the City Board of Supervisors meeting.

TAJA’s Coalition has issued the following demands in advance of Tuesday’s action:
1. We demand that cisgender people end violence against trans communities, and particularly transwomen of color. Transphobia and violence against trans people is not a trans problem. It is a problem rooted in and created by cisgender people, and there is a call to see active support of and participation in local and national efforts to create resources, access and justice for our trans communities.

2. Trans communities need safety and access to resources, not jails. We demand that all plans for new jail in San Francisco be ceased, and that no new jail construction is included in any City planning or budget with funds being routed instead to trans community programming, especially re-entry support and anti-violence work, with respect for the depth of work not the quantity.
3. We demand safe, affordable, and accessible housing for trans people. The rising cost of living in San Francisco, fueled by municipal protections for corporate interests at the expense of our most vulnerable residents, has forced countless trans people into unsafe living situations. Additionally, the massive gentrification of the Mission, Tenderloin, and SOMA neighborhoods in the past two years has displaced countless residents. San Francisco must shift its priorities away from protecting corporations and toward providing affordable housing for all who need it and particularly creating affordable housing services, safe housing programs and more safe spaces for trans people.
4. We demand that San Francisco form a transgender commission.

Transgender Gender Variant Intersex Justice Project is in Solidarity With the People of Ferguson

AUGUST 22, 2014

The leadership team of TGI Justice holds solidarity with the family of Mike Brown and the people of Ferguson, who have endured unspeakable human rights abuses at the hands of law enforcement including and following the police murder of Mr. Brown on August 9th. TGI Justice Project is a group of transgender people—inside and outside of prison—creating a united family in the struggle for survival and freedom. We work in collaboration with others to forge a culture of resistance and resilience to strengthen us for the fight against imprisonment, police violence, racism, poverty, and societal pressures. We seek to create a world rooted in self-determination, freedom of expression, and gender justice.

We share your pain and outrage at the loss of yet another young Black man’s life and the subsequent assault on your community by police, and call these assaults out as clear and irrefutable examples of the deep, systemic racism that informs the Prison Industrial Complex in this country. This is a system that leaves our brothers, sisters, and loved ones dying in the streets or locked up in unconvincing numbers in a dehumanizing network of jails, deportation centers, and prisons. This is a system deeply rooted in a long and consistent history of gendered racial injustice in the United States. This is a system that seeks to rob us of our most essential dignities as humans, and we are here to say that we join you in the struggle against the racist police state and towards a future of self-determination for our communities.

As an organization led by formerly incarcerated Black transgender women, we are certainly no strangers to police profiling, systemic criminalization, and brutality at the hands of law enforcement. We are with you in heart, spirit, and action as you push back against those in power who would try to kill, harm, degrade, and silence you. The revolutionary work you are doing in the streets of Ferguson, standing tall in the face of what must be unbearable grief, empowers and emboldens us.

We want you to know that the eyes of the world are on Ferguson, and that your sisters and brothers, and loved ones in the San Francisco Bay Area join you in demanding justice.

Be safe and stay strong,
TGI Justice Project Leadership Team

DECEMBER 24, 2014

To our beloved members, supporters, friends, and allies: Genderflict greetings from the [work] in the SF Bay Area! TGI Justice Project salutes the militant, focused, non-violent and popular actions in Ferguson and across the world rising up against police and state violence while affirming that BlackLivesMatter. We are proud of TGI Justice Project’s participation in the response to police violence and the non-indictment of the murderers of Michael Brown and Eric Garner. Our staff and members have been out in the streets, in coalition meetings, at actions, in each-one-teach-one conversations with people as we move through the world. We have been alongside other TGI people showing up to demonstrate that no business as usual will be tolerated, that this ends today. TGI Justice Project appreciates the consideration and solidarity being extended to TGI people who are putting their bodies into the action of resistance and survival; appreciates the care from community in police vans, the attention and unity as binary jail housing is enforced on protesters, the looking out for each other as tear gas is shot, and all the ways we are holding, loving and supporting one another in this struggle as we make sure no is left behind. Amidst the uprisings, we have endured the continued violence against trans women of color that was so present in 2014. Early in December, our siblings in the trans liberation struggle down in L.A. lost a wonderful community leader to gun violence. Rest in Power Deshawna Sanchez. Days later, our community in Georgia had a sister torn from them when Keymoni Shatoya Johnson was murdered. In this moment of anguish and anger, in a year of heightened violence against Black trans women and trans women of color, TGI Justice Project has been heartened and grounded by the truth that the fence queer women’s leadership behind #BlackLivesMatter is building a movement that understands that Black Lives means all Black Lives. Black Trans Lives, Black Women’s Lives, Black Queer Lives, Black Poor Lives, Black People-with-Disabilities’ Lives, Black Survivors’ Lives. While policing and criminalization disproportionately affect the Black Trans community, it is the entire reach of our family that is endangered by the devaluing of Black and Black Lives. TGI Justice Project celebrates this moment as a movement moment, a time when we are part of a collective process of changing the course of everyone’s lives by strategically focusing on changing the conditions of Black life in this country. We are here among you and your allies in the Bay Area and across the country. We at TGI Justice Project believe that we will win! #TransPeopleInTheStruggle #Solidarity #BlackLivesMatter

For centuries, the devastating consequences of U.S. imperialism have been the order of the day for third world people from Vietnam to Korea, from the Dakotas to Haiti, from the Philippines to Palestine to Pakistan, from Hawaii to Mexico, and from Ferguson to Staten Island. We stand together today in the name of Dr. King, Malcolm X, the Black Panthers, Brown Berets, Red Guard, and Americanization Movement who took on the state-sanctioned attacks on our communities directly, elevating the struggle against state violence and for an end to the capitalist system that deplives killer cops and militarized repression against our people.

In the words of Malcolm X: “It is incorrect to classify the revolt of the Negro as simply a racial conflict of Black against White, or a purely American problem. Rather, we are today seeing a global rebellion of the oppressed against the oppressor, the exploited against the exploiter.”

Justice for Michael Brown, Eric Garner,
Tariq Rice and all victims of police: End State Violence!

Black Liberation is for All of Us

By ANNIE DANGER

And as a low-income, white, trans woman I have it easier than black trans women in my position. If I look deeper into every part of my life there have access to safety or a trust that I’ll be okay, it is built on the legacy of white people enacting violence on black, brown, and native bodies and very much on the legacy of white people lifting ourselves through the subjugation of black people. My comfort is tied to this genocide.

As a person conscious of these issues, I view it as my responsibility to take part in liberation struggles which seek to right this horrible imbalance power. Accordingly, I have nothing but love and support for this new blossoming of black liberation struggle in the US. What privilege to get to fight for the liberation of other people? What a scary challenge to try and do well and in ways that use the resources I have to add to the struggle, not make it about myself.

When I hear people correct “Black Lives Matter” to “All lives matter”, I hear people trying to get their's instead of supporting this moment of liberation for black people. So many lives matter. But bringing justice into our society is a lifetime of work to be done. We will have to work together every step of the way if we want to truly get liberation. And that story won’t get told all at once. It happens a little bit of time at a time. Which means the sentence were on right now is just that: the next step.

If you want to know me
By FATIMA SHAYLA PEARL, CALIFORNIA

If you want to know me then you need to know how I flow, because there’s more to me than looking pretty and the way my hips sashay to and fro, more to me than my fashion forward clothes or how I stand tall like an African queen in my four-inch stilettos.

If you really wanna know about me, then you need to know about all those dark nights, and all those dark years I spent crying for redemption, shedding buckets of tears. The soul searing pain I suffered trying to conquer my fears. You need to know about how looking like a boy but living like a girl got me killed by being judged and mis-judged by a hateful jury of my hateful peers, you wanna know me you need to know about those tears.

You wanna know me, you need to know about my life on the street accumulating milions of emotional scars, and I got some stories to tell about jumping in and out of random dumpsters, and fear for my life that gave me physical pain. Let me tell you the story of how my best friend had his best friends gang rape me. How the thought taking turns fucking me would only hurt me like all did was scrape off my knee, ‘I’ll tell you all that, since you want to know me.’

Knowing me means knowing I’ve seen just as many of my sisters die in dark alleys on cold nights as I have brothers die on dark streets in gun fights, truth is in all these high profile rainbow fights no one really gives a damn about that a tray who’s gay rights, or her drug addiction, or her HIV condition, and believe me that dude with his dick in my mouth ain’t hitting on me with a better job proposition, all he’s offering is me another $50.00 to come to me in the face down ass up position so his friend can fuck me too, the way these cops and judges do. See, you seem to think it’s easy being me but shit like gay rape can change your perception of reality, but, you said you want to get to know me . . . you wanna know me you need to know that this hard looks in my eyes comes from too many years of selling my ass in unfair back alley deals to people who don’t care about my bills, only how good my head game feels.

So you can spare me the I want to get to know you better shtick, because I won’t be doing any interviews for any of your sensational puff piece talk shows, choosing for the camera while your disrespectful producers try to disrespect my femininity with dumb ass before and after photos.

A Place I’ll Never Call Home
By D. NELSON

The pain and hurt always endured. Shame and blame I knew that could, Could continue its path with no regret Nightmare and hatred poised with a threat, I wish I could move dozens of mountains, Pursue a dream with love and confidence, All I do is home and hope to no avail. A place on earth I’ll call hell. What’s the measure of wrong or right, Death creeps within my sight, I don’t know whether to run, or give, It’s gonna always take over and win, Where are the things I can do, So messed up on old and new, Places I can’t go can abolish me, Hell in home it could never be. A place I’ll never call home!

The Person Inside Me...

By PUNKIN SCOVIL

It’s a different world than where I come from And so I must adjust: I find it hard to be myself But yet, I know I must: I do not hide my feelings Or who I chose to be Because I want this world to know The person inside me And so I just oblige I give them all I’ve got I do not hold back nothing I teach what I’ve been taught. I answer every question That is thrown my way I tell this world about myself I have so much to say About black rage I can change your perception of reality, but, you said you want to get to know me . . . you wanna know me you need to know that this hard looks in my eyes comes from too many years of selling my ass in unfair back alley deals to people who don’t care about my bills, only how good my head game feels. That is why... I am an unconnected woman!

Unconquered

Veins run with women’s blood which burns within of hatred

Born into the world of oppression They seek to suppress our ways To deteriorate my spirit—in minds The native woman is worthy of the ancestor’s ways Their legacy has been handed down—through many compromises My blood flows freely through which society tries to diminish my own being Constructing concrete With twisted metal, sharp-n shiny Enforcing made-up laws Trying to contain and break me My image does not conform But makes my desire—everlasting Goals of mine remain unfulfilled The skin I’m into woven Derive from this beautiful land Yet I’m outcast into a Mode My crimson red color bleeds for Bravery and Honor consumes my being Our people ways outright rejected Defined by the war battle scars I know died away Though, still standing strongly Too big and—too calm Despite all my afflictions These chains can’t bind No more of what’s real—what’s freedom Their lies don’t hold me down at all That restrict my sight Because why... I am an unconnected woman!!

The walls and stones of every prison are imbued with the memories and folklore of the convicts who have passed through—steeped with all their many sorrows and tears—laughter and tears—who if could speak—would whisper of the many years.

Those within the free world are amazed by the incredible span of events and experiences which abound and circulate within prison cultures—some of which achieve the status of movements among the convicts—the details of most are lost within a generation or two—are rarely they are given written form—shared orally among only the prisoners and their families.
Give This Day a Goal
BY AL CUNNINGHAM
Give this day a goal, or two or three or a dozen. Then set about one by one, to make them happen. You can accomplish just about anything you ask of yourself, yet in order to accomplish, you do need to ask. Make your goals specific and clear. When you know exactly what you intend to do, you’re well on your way to getting it done. Make your goals meaningful and memorable. The more they mean to you, the less likely you are to become sidetracked by all the distractions that will come your way. You now have this day which to work. Give yourself something meaningful to make of it. Give this day a goal. With your energy focused on accomplishment. And this day, in return will give you great value that lasts for a long time.

Remember Stonewall of 1969
BY REV. DR. KIMBERLY JADE MCBRIDE
Our people have a great and rich history that is as old as time. We are making huge advances in our civil rights which are granted by God and by the U.S. Constitution. Yet, our people in the penal system are still denied basic human rights. We cannot even get married to the one we love unless one of us is not behind these walls. We are still being harassed and mistreated, and yet how long shall it go on? I will answer this question, as long as we do nothing as a family then we will continue to suffer. But, this means from within and without.

When HIV/AIDS hit the prison system and people were dying outside the community Acted Up. But, what has happened? I believe since the LGBT Outside Family has gotten what they wanted, i.e. gays in open military service, right to marry, etc., then we are inside lost because CDCR (and other state prison systems) encourage discrimination. How?

LGBT custody staff and free staff are the hardest on us. They believe they need to show they are not “punks” and thus we get the worst treatment from our own. I will close by simply saying unless we stand as one as we all fall separately.

May God direct the path we walk. May we all join as one and remember our roots. We are a family, we are community, we are Lesbian, Gay, Bisexual, Transgender, Queer, and more than anything PROUD! Remember Stonewall of 1969!

We Are “Colors of Our Rainbow”
BY NINA MCGUEN
Wondering souls of the rainbow. Self-navigating through the fog of gender bias. Hollow hearts filled with jaded love, but unwilling to darken, motivated by the truth of our man and womanhood. Unbowed by societies shattered reflection of who we are. We walk outside our rainbow colors of red, orange, yellow, green, blue, and purple. They comfort us in our journey for equality. Who are we, are we your sisters and brothers, mothers and fathers: We are your friends, and co-workers, we are LGBT. Feel our colors and then you will know our hearts, see our colors and respect our journey. Being LGBT isn’t a flaw, we are the glitters of the world. So even when bigotry and hatred rains down on us there will always be the colors of our rainbow shining through with righteousness.

All My Lovers Ways To Me
BY SOLERIC GULBRONSON
It’s what I feel in your arms that makes me who I am
This one of a kind love when we’re walking hand in hand
I’m standing on the edge and I could fall forever
Baby you’re the only one who makes me feel this way
Everything about you and every single day
I just wanna hold you until this pain goes away
And I know this is a once in a lifetime thing
To be your lover and know the joy you bring
When we’re together I begin to see
Baby how much you really mean to me
Free… to be myself with you
There’s nothing I wouldn’t do—for you
You’ll never realize and never have a clue
But what is your love can truly do.

Free
BY B. “SHYLA” THOMPSON
As I’ve laid down quietly
Thinking of what could of been, Instead, trapped within these walls, Wishing I was still in your arms. Holding close to my heart
Wishing I could be with you Instead of this living hell
Miss the kisses, caresses so softly
Holding tenderly with warm embrace
Oh I wish I was Free!
To be with my darling so sweet
Pain and regrets we’ve shared It’s hard to remember
When it was, to be with you That I’ve become like these walls
Trapped…. forever it seems
I wish, that I was set free!
Free! to be with you
Where I can feel your breath
Just one last time. I only wish for
To feel you, to be free
Oh! The pain we’ve shared
The darkness that engulfs my spirit
Makes my heart ache… just to be free…
Free. Free!
Sorry love… It seems the only way
You know that I’ve always loved you
To my last dying breath
I’m free finally
I love you forever
You’re my darling…
…my freedom!

Reclaiming MLK’s Legacy of Militant Internationalism
Linking Third World Struggle With Black Resistance

“Before long they must know that our government has sent them into a struggle among Vietnamese, and the more sophisticated surely realize that we are on the side of the wealthy, and the secure, while we create a hell for the poor. Somehow this madness must cease. We must stop now. I speak as a child of God and brother to the suffering poor of Vietnam. I speak for those whose land is being laid waste, whose homes are being destroyed, whose culture is being subverted. I speak for the poor of America who are paying the double price of smashed hopes at home, and death and corruption in Vietnam. I speak as a citizen of the world, for the world as it stands oghast at the path we have taken.”

DR. MARTIN LUTHER KING, JR. IN BEYOND VIETNAM – A TIME TO BREAK SILENCE, 1967

To kick off Martin Luther King Jr. weekend, thirdworld people and allies have shut down the Oakland Federal Building to demonstrate our support for the heightened struggle for Blackliberation, power, self-defense and self-determination in the U.S. The verdicts in the cases of Michael Brown, Eric Garner and Tami Rice, have drawn renewed attention to the ways that policing and the “justice system” are used to wage war on Black communities in service of imperialism and white supremacy that continues to undergirds country. For MLK weekday we’re reclaiming militancy and internationalism that was the hallmark of the last phase of Dr. King’s life.

We join international movements for the liberation of Palestine, Haiti, and the Philippines, for indigenous sovereignty in Hawaii, for native peoples in the U.S. and Mexico, and for immigrant, worker, queer/transgender, and youth justice in communities in solidarity with the resuring calls to build “Black Power” and “Black Resistance” alongside the original nationwide galvanizing statement that “Blacklives Matter!”

Today’s action targets the Oakland Federal Building because of its role in promoting a war on Black people and people’s struggles for self-determination in the U.S. and around the world. Protecting their imperialist economic interests, the U.S. and its collaborators like Israel and its puppet states like the Philippines are co-developing and deploying military and policing tactics in an attempt to perfect techniques of counter-insurgency, crowd and population control, surveillance, and the militarization of local police forces. In the Bay Area, people struggling against surveillance, policing, detention, forced displacement, deportation, and militarization of their schools and communities, both here and in their homelands, are connecting the dots and linking these issues with the systemic problem of settler colonialism in places like Palestine.

As the state attempts to tamp down the rising fists of dissent, people’s movements in Ferguson, Haiti, Palestine, the Philippines, and across the globe are only intensifying. And as an extension, today in the Bay Area, we are organizing together and deepening our collective commitment to the increasingly militant struggle for Black liberation and self-determination. We know that we cannot fight imperialism abroad unless we fight its domestic manifestation – violent racist policing – in our own streets.

The West has built and structured this world on Black death, while systemically-waging attacks on third world people in their struggle for self-determination. By exposing and confronting these systems, we seek to weaken their foundations, and strengthen our bear the burden of state-sponsored Darwinian experiments that attempt to squeeze us into boxes of normality defined by White supremacyp is state violence. And the fact is that the lives of Black people—not all people—exist within these conditions is consequence of state violence.

When Black people get free, everybody gets free.

Blackstock's matter doesn’t mean your life isn’t important—it means that Black lives, which are seen as valueless within White supremacyp is, are important to your liberation. Given the disproportionate impact state violence has on Black lives, we understand that when Black people in this country get free, the ben- efits will be wide reaching and transformative for society as a whole. When we are able to end hyper-criminalization and sexualization of Black people and end the poverty, control, and surveillance of Black people, every single person in this world has a better shot at get- ting and staying free. When Black people get free, everybody gets free. This is why we call on Black people and our allies to take up the call that Black lives matter. We’re not saying Black lives are more important than other lives, or that other lives are any less important or oppressed in various ways. We remain in active solidarity with all oppressed people who are fighting against the systems and structures we know that the destinies are intertwined.

And, to keep it real—it is appropriate and necessary to have strategy and action centered around Black people’s struggles against Black communities of color, or White folks for that matter, needing to find a place and a way to contribute to the work of the people who are oppressed and necessary for us to acknowledge the critical role that Black lives and struggles for Black liberation play in the larger movement. An- arching, through practice and theory, and social movements for the liberation of all people. The women’s movement, the Chicano libera- tion movement, queer movements, and many more have adopted the strategies, tactics, and theory of the Black liberation movement. And if we are doing justice to the importance of our context.

Progressive movements in the United States have made some unfortunate errors when they push for unity at the expense of really under- standing the concrete differences in context, experience and oppression. In other words, some want unity without struggle. As people who have our minds stayed on freedom, we can learn to fight anti-Black racism by exam- ining the ways in which we participate in it, even unintentionally, instituting the work of the opposition to the politics of existing to practice saying lazy paradoxes of unity between peoples with vastly different experiences and histories.

We are to deploy “All Lives Matter” as a cor- rect intervention specifically created to address anti-blackness, we lose the ways in which the state apparatus has built a pro- gram of genocide and repression mostly on the backs of Black people—beginning with the theft of millions of people for free labor—and then adapting it to control, murder, and profit of off of other communities of color and immi- grant communities. We permeate a level of White supremacist domination by reproducing a tred trope that we are all the same, rather than acknowledging that non-Black oppressed people in this country are both impacted by racism and domination, and simultaneously, BEnEFIT from anti-black racism.

When you drop “Black” from the equation of whose lives matter, and then fail to acknowl- edge it came from somewhere, you further a legacy of erasing Black lives and Black con- tributions from our movement legacy. And consider whether or not when dropping the Black you are, intentionally or unintention- ally, erasing Black folks from the conversation and homogenizing, very different, experiences. The legacy and prevalence of anti-Black rac- ism and hetero-patriarchy is a Lynch pin hold- ing together this unsustainable economy. And it’s not an accidental analogy.

In 2014, hetero-patriarchy and anti-Black racism within our movement is real and felt. It’s killing us and it’s killing our potential to build power for transformative social change. When you adopt the work of queer women of color or trans folks, you’re important to our context. In doing so, we must work to uproot the structures that keep us from defining our identity in the first place, but also from subverting the structures that keep us from defining our identity today.

When you adopt Black Lives Matter and trans- form it into something else (if you feel you really need to do that—see above for the ways in which to do it), it’s important to ask yourself what you’re really doing and the impor- tance of Black contributions to the struggle for human rights. If you adapt Black Lives Matter, use the opportunity to talk about its inception and political framing. Lift up Black lives as an opportunity to connect struggles across class, race, gender, nationality, sexuality and more.

And, perhaps more importantly, when Black people cry out in defense of our lives, which are uniquely, systematically, and savagely targeted felt only by the state, we are asking you to stand with us in affirming Black lives. Not just all lives. Black lives. Please do not change the conversation by talking about how your life matters, too. It does, but we need less watered down unity and a more active solidarities with us, Black people, unwaveringly, in defense of our community. Our collective futures depend on it.

Transgender and Some Educational Thoughts on Genders/Gays

Some Events We Face as Girls in Prison

BY R. “SHILOH” QUINE

Within the “Standards of Care” first and foremost studies on GId transgender resource, it is notably clear “gay inamates” are totally different type than “transgenders.” One has absolutely nothing to do with the other. Being transgender is only about gender, nothing to do with sexual orientation. In reality it’s a com- mon mistake, not confusing once you realize we are women “not gay” even if some transgender girls have a libido drive for both men/women activity they are transgenders first not gay, neither are wrong. Under the Harry Benjamin treatment of transsexuality it is a “TG” com- munity population that knowledge is set forth (adequate pro based data) but surprisingly, we have an ongoing stigma of the same as “gay inmates” and here at (SVPW) we are not allowed the same privileges of a support group (TG). That would include our peers within the popu- lation as other inmates are allowed this posi- tion. No transgender inmates obtain inmate “medical association” practices that deprive us of an equal comprehensive standard for CDI. Specifically, to label this facility “transgender friendly” the homophbic practices of a “de facto policies” of correctional staff are allowing/requiring/advancing/using unnecessary pronunciation addressing us as “he” instead of “they”, necessary “gender medical association” practices that deprive us of the valid extensions of this hormone treat- ment.

Support groups/psych services was implemented. I appeared at two groups and recognize there is little knowledge in regards to transgenders associated to our keepers. Not a very valid support group. Significantly, I was addressed as a man, third meeting felt this was a fictitious group as the labels of “transgender friendly” yards. Nothing is consistent to reflect this. The staff at the door talked to me as if I was something he would walk over to apologize for the negativity to the group. Also I’m happy for the knowledge (even though sad) of Lacy, a tranny who transferred to Donovan that was killed by her cellie shortly after. My tears fell, felt at the position that we are endowed as a person. I recognize that when each of us fight and push forward we push forward for all of us transgenders. The history and knowl- edge in regards to us trannies is little and I feel sometimes not adequate in regards to “Gender Identity Disorder” (GID). We sometimes suf- fer from our predecessors that have control over us. I don’t feel I have a “disorder” at all. Gays are born gay men or bi, tranny girls “even though deemed men” are not. Gays fit in easier than we do within the population. We should be distinct obviously as “real female” without the biases, even without the completed surgery we are completely women with personality feminine in an unaccepted world and environment. I do not consider the prescribed current standard appropriate in regards to updated knowledge even under the old Harry Benjamin 1885-1896 related to TG issues. I don’t consider myself to be a person with GID or labeled as a TG. Some people are born as women. There is need for updated and valid policies related to the fact that we should be accepted as women. Writing for TG women (TG). Kris was (as far as I know) the label GID why not “Distinguish Woman Kind” (DWK) with the continuation of the hormone treatment, calling us transves, sir or Mr. is a terribly used weapon as a weapon other forms of abuse inflicted on us in the fact that we get hormone therapy in prison. Transgender being born/dying all TGs. Being denied rights isn’t “friendly” not allow- ing i.e. A.C.O. or other medical items is unjust to our “medical needs.” Retaliation will come by way of manipulation by the staff, denial of medical care labelled as troublemakers even a snitch consequences for fighting for you human rights fulfillment that is supported by forms of international standards framework to which is a powerful concept to apply when pushing for social political changes recognized in the global world struggles for justice of the viola- tions of our human rights. It is said that this facility would provide adequate means soon…

Dear TGI,

My name is Aaliyah S. I am incarcerated at Lavigne Correctional Institution in North Carolina. I am the first person in the state of North Carolina prison out of male and female to obtain hormonal therapy, then transition, to the strong powerful black woman I am. I had to be transferred to another prison because of discrimination by a female cor- rection officer. She grabbed her breast and smacked her butt and said in from of the other inmates that I want what she got and that God gave it to her and her body is natural. So I like to my transgender sisters, know Ms. Aaliyah is not the one to bite her tongue for anyone. So I told Ms. Thing what I thought of her and then place a grievance on her. I am still fighting for my treatment but I am still about to make history in N.C. prison sys- tem. To all my sisters I say fight for who you are and what you believe in and never ever give up! I am 25 years old and still fighting mentally, physically, and emotionally for I will not be pushed around by anyone. You may not like me for who I am but I will respect you and give me space to stay strong sister.

P.S. Thank you TGI and North Carolina ACLU and my sisters keep your heart warm in your eye and know we’re the future. We can’t be stopped. I will keep everyone posted on my treatment. I love all of you sister.

Aaliyah S.

A Herstory of the
BlackLivesMatter Movement

BY ALICIA GARZA, REPRINTED FROM THE FEMINIST WIRE WITH PERMISSION

I created #BlackLivesMatter with Patrisse Cullors and Opal Tometi, two of my sisters, as a call to action for Black people after 17-year-old Trayvon Martin was post-humously placed on trial for his own murder and the killer, George Zimmerman, was not held accountable for the crime he committed. It was a response to the anti-Black racism that permeates our society and also, unfortunately, our movements.

Black Lives Matter is an ideological and political intervention in a world where Black lives are systematically and intentionally targeted for demise. It is an affirmation of Black folks’ contributions to this society, our humanity, and our resilience in the face of deadly oppression.

We were humbled when cultural workers, artists, designers and techies offered their labor and love to expand #BlackLivesMatter beyond a social media hashtag. Opal, Patrisse, and I created the infrastructure for this movement project—moving the hashtag from social media to the streets. Our team grew through a very successful Black Lives Matter ride, led and designed by Patrisse Cullors and Darnell L. Moore, organized to support the movement that is growing in St. Louis, MO, after 18-year-old Mike Brown was killed at the hands of Ferguson Police Officer Darren Wilson. We’ve hosted national conference calls focused on issues of critical importance to Black people working hard for the liberation of our people. We’ve connected people across the country working to end the various forms of injustice impacting our people. We’ve created space for the celebration and humanization of Black lives.

The Theft of Black Queer Women’s Work
As people took the #BlackLivesMatter demand into the streets, mainstream media and corporations also took up the call, #BlackLivesMatter appeared in an episode of Low & Order: SVU in a mash-up containing the Paula Deen racism scandal and the tragedy of the murder of Trayvon Martin.

Suddenly, we began to come across varied adaptations of our work—all lives matter, brown lives matter, migrant lives matter, women’s lives matter, and on and on. While imitation is said to be the highest form of flattery, I was surprised when an organization called to ask if they could use “Black Lives Matter” in one of their campaigns. We agreed to it, with the caveat that a) as a team, we preferred that we not use the meme to celebrate the imprisonment of any individual and b) that it was important to us they acknowledged the gender of #BlackLivesMatter. I was surprised when they did exactly the opposite and then justified their actions by saying they hadn’t used the “exact” slogan and, therefore, deemed it okay to take our work, use it as their own, fail to credit where it came from, and then use it to applaud incarceration.

I was surprised when a community institution wrote asking us to provide materials and action steps for an art show they were curating, entitled “Our Lives Matter.” When questioned about who was involved and why they felt the need to change the very specific call and demand around Black lives to “our lives,” I was told the artists decided it needed to be more inclusive of all people of color. I was even more surprised when, in the promotion of their event, one of the artists conducted an interview that completely erased the origins of their work—rooted in the labor and love of queer Black women.

Pause.

When you design an event / campaign / et cetera based on the work of queer Black women, don’t invite them to participate in shaping it, but ask them to provide materials and ideas for next steps for said event, that is racism in practice. It’s also hetero-patriarchal. Straight men, unintentionally or intentionally, have taken the work of queer Black women and erased our contributions. Perhaps if we were the charismatic Black men many are railing around these days, it would have been a different story, but being Black queer women in this society (and apparently within these movements) tends to equal invisibility and non-relevancy.

We completely expect those who benefit directly and improperly from White supremacy to try and erase our existence. We fight that every day. But when it happens amongst our allies, we are baffled, we are saddened, and we are enraged. And it’s time to have the political conversation about why that’s not okay.

We are grateful to our allies who have stepped up to the call that Black lives matter, and taken it as an opportunity to just stand in solidarity with us, but to investigate the ways in which anti-Black racism is perpetuated in their own communities. We are also grateful to those allies who were willing to engage in critical dialogue with us about this unfortunate and problematic dynamic. And for those who we have not yet had the opportunity to engage with around the adaptations of the Black Lives Matter call, please consider the following points.

Broadening the Conversation to Include Black Life
Black Lives Matter is a unique contribution that goes beyond extrajudicial killings of Black people by police and vigilantes. It goes beyond the narrow nationalism that can be prevalent within some Black communities, which merely call on Black people to love Black, live Black and buy Black, keeping straight cis Black men in the front of the movement while our sisters, queer and trans and disabled folk take up roles in the background or not at all. Black Lives Matter affirms the lives of Black queer and trans folks, disabled folks, Black-undocumented folks, folks with records, women and all Black lives along the gender spectrum. It centers those that have been marginalized within Black liberation movements. It is a tactic to re/build the Black liberation movement.

When we say Black Lives Matter, we are talking about the ways in which Black people are deprived of our basic human rights and dignity. It is an acknowledgment Black poverty and genocide is state violence. It is an acknowledgment that 1 million Black people are locked in cages in this country—one half of all people in prisons or jails—is an act of state violence. It is an acknowledgment that Black women continue to bear the burden of a relentless assault on our children and our families and that assault is an act of state violence. Black queer and trans folks bearing a unique burden in a hetero-patriarchal society that disposes of us like garbage and simultaneously fetishizes us and profits off of us is state violence; the fact that 500,000 Black people in the US are undocumented immigrants and relegated to the shadows is state violence; the fact that Black girls are used as negotiating chips during times of conflict and war is state violence; Black folks living with disabilities and different abilities...
